Dear Mr Sanyal,

I am emailing to send once again my sincerest apologies for the event being unable to go ahead as planned this morning.

It is incredibly unfortunate: all of us from many countries were looking forward to it. Our audience in Oxford sent a great many questions, and we were all working hard to pull a number of elements together. However, nothing prevails over circumstances sometimes, it seems.

I sincerely hope that the Hon'ble Chief Minister will understand, and might honour us with her esteemed presence at the earliest possible convenience to you. With your permission, I will pass your details onto my successor, to whom I hand over this Friday.

Once again, my deepest apologies, and to reiterate the Union would be happy and proud to welcome the Hon'ble Chief Minister whenever may be convenient in her busy election schedule.

With warm regards, and best wishes,

Beatrice
